ILONA, MISTRESS ABUSED BY LEIDIG

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER CLOSE to a week of testimony about how Iлона Leidig vandalized her ex-husband's house, frequently threatened him and tried to keep him from getting medical care after shooting him in the chest, defense attorney Richard Rosen began painting a picture Wednesday of a traumatized, battered and deceived woman who was driven by fear to pull the trigger.

'Ted is a very good liar, and I'm the kind of person who would believe him.'

— Iлона Leidig

She is set to testify again in Monterey County Superior Court Judge Lydia Villarreal's courtroom Feb. 25.

Apologizing for being "mentally exhausted" during the fifth day of her jury trial, Iлона Wozniski Leidig talked of a brutal childhood in Scranton, Penn., in which her alcoholic father regularly beat her and her mother before leaving the family. Iлона was the oldest of five children. Soon after Stanley Wozniski and Vera Simone divorced, the 11 year old began cleaning houses

Hollywood zooms in on a star whose mind is somewhere else

Clint and Dina Eastwood attended the Screen Actors Guild awards Feb. 5 to support Morgan Freeman and Hilary Swank, who won for their work in Eastwood's "Million Dollar Baby." Oddsmakers expect the film to clean up at Sunday's Oscars.

SUNDAY NIGHT could be the biggest night of Clint Eastwood's professional life.

His latest movie, "Million Dollar Baby," has been widely acclaimed as the best picture of the year and could pick up seven Academy Awards.

But while most of the other Oscar-nominated actors, producers and directors were getting botox shots and fake tans, Eastwood was at the Marines Memorial in San Francisco Wednesday helping commemorate the 60th Anniversary of the flag raising on Iwo Jima, in preparation for his next project.

"I'll just be hanging out, listening to personal stories, because the more I get to know these World War II guys, the more I understand what they're all about," Eastwood said Wednesday morning.

"Million Dollar Baby," for all its success, was a relatively modest film with a production budget of $24 million. But Eastwood's next movie will be a colossal undertaking.

"Flags of Our Fathers," due to be released in 2006, will tell the story of history's most famous photograph — the anguish and the heroism that led a group of six ordinary Americans to the summit of Mt. Suribachi on Feb. 23, 1945, and the conflict and tragedy that followed the raising of the Stars and Stripes there.

The script for the film is complete. Paul

STEINBECK'S LEGACY LIVES ON IN MONTEREY AND PACIFIC GROVE

By CHRIS COUNTS

THANKS TO talk of shutting the city's entire library system, the whole country has once again been reminded that John Steinbeck hailed from Salinas. What could be more ironic than doing away with public libraries in a city that produced a Nobel Prize-winning novelist?

The Wing Chong market at 835 Cannery Row 'was a miracle of supply,' according to John Steinbeck, who wrote, 'The one commodity Lee Chong did not keep could be had across the lot at Doris's.'

But even Monterey County residents may not realize that, while Steinbeck's words are consigned to the yellowed pages of old books and the people who inspired his fictional characters have all passed away, many of the places he described in such vivid detail have scarcely changed in the 21st century. And many of them are right here on the Monterey Peninsula.

Steinbeck would have been 103 years old on Feb. 27. He died in 1968, but a handful of Steinbeck enthusiasts on the Peninsula are keeping his memory alive by preserving, restoring or just simply recognizing the places important to Steinbeck and his literary legacy.

Michael Hemp is the co-founder and vice president of the nonprofit Cannery Row Foundation, a group dedicated to preserving the history of the street made famous in Steinbeck's eponymous 1945 novel.

Hemp believes the words of Steinbeck are just as relevant today as they were when he penned them more than half a century ago.

"He was a man of the people," explained Hemp, a Carmel Valley resident, publisher, historian and the author of "Cannery Row, the History of John Steinbeck's Old Ocean View Avenue."

"He never wrote about anybody famous. He wrote about people who were struggling for their part of the American Dream. He wrote about bums and whores and cannery workers. They were his heroes as he portrayed the struggle of simple hardworking people against the system."

In addition to the timeless themes he explored, Steinbeck was an extraordinary writer.

Kalisa's La Ida Cafe at 851 Cannery Row was once simply La Ida Cafe, a brothel run by a woman named Wide Ida, and immortalized by John Steinbeck.

"His words were so graphic and so moving," Hemp said. "He used words that light up visions in your head."

Hemp will be on hand to greet visitors Feb. 27 for guided tours of Ed Ricketts' Pacific Biological Laboratories at 800 Cannery Row in Monterey. Ricketts was Steinbeck's close friend and inspired the character "Doc" in "Cannery Row" and "Sweet Thursday."

PLANTING MANGROVES. Repairing boats. Hauling a generator to a tent village. Digging a well. Two dozen volunteers, including 18 from the Monterey Peninsula, left Sunday for the tsunami-ravaged islands of Thailand to tackle those jobs and many others.

"I'm nervous about what I'm getting myself into — I'm going in blind," retired California Department of Forestry firefighter Steve Benoit, a Pacific Grove Ocean Rescue volunteer who lives in Del Rey Oaks, said before he and the rest of the group left Feb. 20. "But it sounds like a good project, and there's work needing to be done."

Carmel Valley resident Marilyn Asher, a frequent visitor to Nepal and Thailand, said she hoped a few friends would join her effort to help tsunami victims on the small islands in the Andaman Sea.

"I was hoping to have five people, or six or seven, and it just mushroomed," she said. "Everyone had friends and family who wanted to help."

Asher coordinated with longtime friend and former C.V. resident Bohdi Garrett, whose Golden Buddha Beach Resort on Koh Phra Thong Island was destroyed by the huge waves. Garrett was in Carmel Valley visiting family during the holidays, according to Asher, but he lost many friends and acquaintances and returned after the disaster to begin assessing the damage and the needs of the villagers who had survived.

Life and livelihood

Two months later, North Andaman Tsunami Relief, which is overseeing the volunteers' work, is focused not just on emergency relief to keep villagers alive and healthy, but on restoring their livelihoods.

"I just heard they're starting to dig a well and will need help with that," Asher said. "They need help with repairing their boats, because they are a fishing community, and they also make lots of crafts because of the tourists there, so we are picking up special dyes in Bangkok for their weaving."

The volunteers, many of whom met each other for the first time just weeks ago, purchased their own tickets for the Thai Air flight out of Los Angeles to Bangkok Sunday afternoon. They were set to join up with other workers coming from Kathmandu and elsewhere.

After recovering from jet lag and buying a generator in the city, they would take the 12-hour bus trip to the mainland area of Kura Buri, Asher said before they left.

"We plan on staying in tents on the islands while we work, because all the buildings were lost or are not fit for inhabiting," she said, adding that Garrett has been working nonstop with volunteers, many of whom can only stay for a couple of weeks before returning to their jobs and families. Several in her group will return March 4, while others — including a woman who quit her job in order to help — will stay as long as they can, Asher said.

"We and the volunteers who are already there will be filling in the gaps" left by international aid agencies and governments, she said. For example, they drop off supplies, but the villagers hesitate to leave their makeshift homes to retrieve them.

"They're a little bit afraid of leaving their property, because what they have left, they want to keep," she explained. "A lot of distribution needs to be done."

A few grief counselors in the group will treat the victims, many of them children, while others help with manual labor.

As a former fireman with extensive training in rescue operations, Benoit said he was frustrated he couldn't be there in the immediate aftermath of the tsunami, which killed hundreds of thousands of people in southern Asia and eastern Africa and left many others homeless and destitute.

"It's too late for rescue, but I would like to be there," said Benoit. "The people who live there want help — they need the bodies."

Before leaving, the group raised money and gathered materials to haul with them, but "we will buy a lot of our supplies in the area to boost the economy, because people

Carmel High grad won't let his big league dreams die

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN THE 1989 Kevin Costner movie, "Field of Dreams," a high school baseball player named "Moonlight" Graham plays in one major league game and gains baseball immortality.

Chris Prieto, who starred as a baseball player at Carmel High School before he graduated in 1990, is still waiting for his chance to play in one major league game.

"I started dreaming about playing in the majors when I was about seven years old," Prieto said last week in Tempe, Arizona. "I love the smell of the grass, the smell of leather and all those small things. Baseball has been a part of my life for so long and I've put so much into it that I can't quit now."

Prieto reported to spring training in Tempe on Feb. 21. He is one of 64 players competing for 25 spots on this year's Los Angeles Angels' roster. "As a 'non-roster' player, Prieto's chances of making the team are slim. Given the fact that he is 32 years old, which is ancient by the standards of a major-league rookie, his chances are even slimmer.

Possibly the biggest hurdle in front of Prieto, though, is not stiff competition nor his advancing age, but the long memory of major-league players who remember Prieto crossing the picket line during a 1994 strike against team owners.

Over 600 aspiring players crossed that same picket line and while 14 eventually made it to Big Leagues, each experienced varying degrees of hostility and resentment from teammates.

"I took some bad advice," said Prieto, recalling his decision to cross the picket line. "I take responsibility for the decision I made. It was an unfortunate situation. Sometimes you don't get a second chance."

At the end of every season, hundreds of minor league players are released from their professional baseball contracts. Most of them last only a year or two in the minors before those who run the Show decide they are expendable. Yet for the 13th straight year, Prieto finds himself collecting

Police & Sheriff's Log

Brother, can you spare a dime for some Advil?

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 13

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A female, age 23, was observed in a vehicle when she failed to stop at a posted stop sign on Junipero. The vehicle showed registration expired as of 12/04. The driver was found to be intoxicated and provided a breath test.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle was parked on Junipero Street in the same parking stall for more than two weeks without moving. It was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A driver was stopped on Monte Verde Street for driving on a suspended license. The driver was cited and the vehicle was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female indicated she thought it was odd that her former boyfriend, his sister and friends of the former boyfriend had, by chance, met with her while she was conducting various chores in the city in the past week. There was no overt action on the aforementioned parties' behalf causing a problem, but she thought it was "weird" that she should run into them. She was counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle parked on Torres Street was known to have several unpaid parking citations on file. The vehicle was towed and stored per the California Vehicle Code.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A couple was involved in an argument over dinner reservations on Mission Street. No problems occurred during the contact.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine 7111 and Ambulance 7166 responded to report of a medical emergency on Mission between Fifth and Sixth on the sidewalk. Units at scene found a 24-year-old female with complaint of having passed out while walking down the street. She was assessed and the suggestion was made that she see an MD in the ER at CHOMP. She refused, was told of the risks, and signed a medical release.

Big Sur: A 56-year-old male security officer at El Sur Ranch reported unknown subjects cut a fence and drove on ranch property.

VALENTINE'S DAY

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Hit-and-run traffic collision on public property on Torres Street. Vehicle was drivable.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a broken glass window at a San Carlos Street store. It appeared to be a vandalism, and no one entered the store.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male Torres Street resident called indicating that he received a condolence card from the wife of a former acquaintance. Apparently, the male's wife passed away one week ago. The male stated that a sergeant had intervened last year and that an informal understanding was developed that there shall be no contact between the two parties. The male asked if the officer would be able to speak with the other party responsible for sending the card. Both parties were counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: San Carlos Street resident reported hearing voices and walking noises upstairs. The house was searched and no problems were found.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Anonymous person advised of possible Carmel Municipal Code violation concerning a San Carlos Street pub having amplified music. Contact was made with the bartender, who advised a permit had been obtained from the city planning commission. They did not have the permit; however,

General plan debate heats up as supervisors weigh options

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE DEBATE over Monterey County's General Plan heated this week with a seven-hour marathon public meeting in Salinas Feb. 23 that gave supervisors an opportunity to hear presentations by two groups with very different views on Monterey County's future.

The Refinement Group wants policies that protect property rights and encourage economic growth, while the Community Plan Coalition usually reflects the views of environmentalists.

Despite the bickering that was evident Wednesday, 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter said the meeting was productive.

"It was worthwhile," he said. "Both groups had an opportunity to highlight what they've accomplished. And if we didn't get a presentation from them, we'd be reading their plans without understanding their intentions."

Can supervisors find common ground between the opposing views?

"What common ground there is has already been found," he said. "The groups have fundamentally different views. It's the responsibility of the board to make a decision."

Potter believes the supervisors will ultimately piece together a plan that will take elements from both, and will incorporate different policies for different parts of the county.

"I think what will happen is you will have area plans," said Potter. "Carmel is not like King City, and Salinas has different issues from Monterey. One size doesn't fit all. What works in Big Sur won't work in Parkfield."

Potter said the greatest challenge facing the board of supervisors is simply taking action. And even when it does, the general plan battle will probably drag on.

"I'm optimistic the board is committed to bring an end to this ancient battle," Potter said. "Will it end up in court? Probably."

John Dalessio, a Carmel Valley resident and member of the Community Plan Coalition, believes a decision by the supervisors on the general plan is imminent.

"It's getting to be an embarrassment," Dalessio said of the five-year, $5 million effort by Monterey County to develop a new general plan. "Politically, I think the supervisors have to come back to the community with something."

Still, Dalessio isn't optimistic about the general plan.

"I think Carmel Valley is in real trouble," he said. "If a pro-development plan goes through, the only thing that can save Carmel Valley is incorporation."

ere have lost everything," he said.

Benoit had heard stories of well-meaning volunteers arriving, only to end up in the way of relief efforts, but he was confident the same would not be true for Asher's group. "Apparently there are people who already have work lined up for us," he said.

Nurses, builders and others with useful skills are among the volunteers, according to Asher. "Everyone has their own area of expertise."

According to a Feb. 9 update from organizers at North Indian Tsunami Relief, the organization has been taking food and water to villages. It has also been finding boats to rebuild, as well as nets and traps the fishermen need to begin working again.

"Where families cannot return to fishing, or where it will be some time before they are able, we have identified other work/labor plans such as handicrafts and mangrove reforestation to bring villagers income," a colleague of Garrett's wrote. "Within the chaos of needs assessment, we continue to take care not to overlap the programs of other agencies, and listen carefully to ensure our programs will be useful to villagers."

NATR recently made its first payment to villagers who made boats and peeled cashews, and volunteers delivered a water filtration system to the Thung Dap village.

On his resort's website, Garrett announced the Golden Buddha Beach Resort will be rebuilt by the end of the year. In the meantime, Asher said much of the challenge lies in helping traumatized villagers return to the islands they had called home before Dec. 26, 2004.

"Survivors are all in camps on the mainland and are afraid to go back to the islands, because they think there's going to be another wave," she said. "I think it's going to take time."

STEINBECK

1936 and was replaced by Ricketts with the wooden structure that exists today. Steinbeck incorporated the fire into "Cannery Row."

"That fire destroyed the most extensive intertidal marine biological data base in existence at the time," explained Hemp.

Perhaps because Steinbeck's "Doc" was based on Ricketts, the names are now used interchangeably, and there's even a bar in Monterey called "Doc Ricketts' Lab." But that's not true to history, Hemp is quick to point out.

"He was known as Ed Ricketts but never Doc Ricketts," Hemp said. "His friends called him Ed."

The tours will begin at 10 a.m. and the last tour will start at 4 p.m. Admission is $15.

Flophouses and well-stocked markets

Across the street from Pacific Biological Laboratories were three buildings that played prominent roles in Steinbeck's writing — La Ida Cafe, the Wing Chong Market and the Lone Star.

La Ida Cafe, which is located at 851 Cannery Row, is now known as Kalisa's Coffeehouse and Ice Cream Parlor. Eddie the Part-Time Bartender from "Cannery Row" worked at La Ida Cafe.

"Eddie would pour all the leftover drinks from the night into one big jug for Mac and the boys at the Palace Flophouse," explained Hemp. "Whenever Eddie worked, a few bottles would disappear."

La Ida Cafe was one of three brothels that operated on Cannery Row during that time. The name derived from the madam, who was known as Wide Ida.

Next door, at 835 Cannery Row is the Wing Chong Market. In "Cannery Row," Steinbeck called the market Lee Chong's Grocery.

"While not a model of neatness, [Lee Chong's] was a miracle of supply," wrote Steinbeck. "The one commodity Lee Chong did not keep could be had across the lot at Dora's."

Dora Flood was the name Steinbeck gave to Flora Woods, who operated the Lone Star brothel on the site.

ere present-day Mackerel Jack's stands. The original acture that housed the brothel is no more.

The Cannery Row Foundation is seeking to designate La Cafe and the Wing Chong Market as historical buildings. "The city has determined they are both eligible for the tional Register of Historic Places," said Kim Coles, senior inner for the City of Monterey. "We are now in the process rezoning those buildings as historic."

If so designated, the two buildings would have extra pro- tions against being demolished to make way for new velopment.

Cannery Row was the setting of three of Steinbeck's best ved books, including "Tortilla Flats," "Cannery Row" and Sweet Thursday."

For more about Steinbeck's role in the history of Cannery ow, visit www.canneryrow.org.

Steinbeck in Pacific Grove

Pacific Grove landmarks such as the Pt. Pinos ighthouse, the grove at the present-day monarch butterfly nctuary and Jewell Park also make appearances in einbeck novels. The lighthouse is featured in no fewer than ree books — "To A God Unknown," "Cannery Row," and Sweet Thursday," according to Esther Trosow, a 12-year onterey resident and archivist at the Pacific Grove useum of Natural History.

Trosow once co-published (with the City of Pacific rove) a free self-guided driving tour map and brochure, John Steinbeck's Pacific Grove."

Perhaps the most interesting Steinbeck site in Trosow's guide is Holman's Department Store. Steinbeck tells the story of the flagpole skater in "Cannery Row."

"Probably nothing in the way of promotion Holman's Department Store ever did attracted so much favorable comment as the engagement of the flagpole skater," wrote Steinbeck. "Day after day, there he was up on his little round platform skating around and around and at night he could be seen up there too, dark against the sky so that everybody knew he didn't come down."

Steinbeck often incorporated actual events into one of his books. A small platform for the skater was built atop the Holman's flagpole. It was removed several years ago and replaced with a communications antenna.

"The flagpole skater was a real daredevil named The Mysterious Mr. X, who set out to break his own record by staying aloft 120 feet above the street for more than 50 hours," explained Trosow.

The guide included directions to 19 different Steinbeck-related Pacific Grove sites and can still be viewed online at Trosow's web site, www.93950.com.

The Number One Wish

Styles and fads come and go. For a time, nearly everyone wanted a home decorated in rich earthtones, then mauves and purples set the style, and on and on it goes, from Scandinavian simplicity to Mediterranean opulence.

A wish that today ranks at or near the top of most buyers' lists and that probably won't soon be replaced by something else is that the commute from a home to a place of work be as short and easy as possible. We are getting progressively fed up with the patience- and health-threatening old stop-and-go for hours on the way to and from work.

And that's not all. Our entire conception of home is undergoing a change. For decades, it's been the mildly luxurious dormitory at the end of the commute from work, the place to eat and sleep, but not necessarily the place to work, play, relax, entertain and find most of our fulfillment in life. Now it is. Some trend students call the change "finding sanctuary."

That has many more ramifications than just the distance to work, and they're well worth discussing because, knowing them, you can increase the value and salability of your home. For assistance call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com

Chef Bayless plays on passion for cuisine of Mexico

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

FOR THOSE readers not able to participate in the Masters of Food & Wine events last Thursday through Sunday, we're going to tell you of several cooking demonstrations that might induce you to experience one or more at next year's 10th annual MF&W at the Highlands Inn at the Hyatt Hotel, Carmel.

Don't think you'll be closeted in a stuffy room watching a chef you can't see unless you're in a front row.

At the Highlands Inn, the Surf Room always the site of cooking demos — a large, airy and sunny venue with windows across one entire side looking out on the sparkling Pacific Ocean. And those windows open, in case the cooking gets too intense, and cooling sea breezes an drift in.

The cooking dais raises the chefs to watchable height; they wear lapel microphones and a mirror overhead is tilted so the audience can see what's cooking in the pots and pans on the range.

As the chef explains his every move, a moderator — for the past several years local chef Wendy Brodie — questions the visiting chef as he prepares the dish-of-demonstration, just to be certain the audience gleans every bit of information necessary to prepare the recipe at home. Attendees are not burdened with note taking during the fascinating instruction, as a printed recipe is provided.

Last Friday at 10:30 a.m., award-winning chef/restaurant, multiple cookbook author and PBS television personality Rick Bayless gave a superb and generously informative cooking demonstration of rack of lamb with dark pasilla chile and woodland mushrooms.

Bayless is owner/chef of Chicago's Topolobampo restaurant, which opened in 1989 following the great success of his Frontera Grill, which specialized in contemporary regional Mexican cuisine. Chicago, according to Bayless, has a very large Mexican population.

You can watch his "One Plate at a Time" cooking show at 9 a.m. every Saturday on KQED. His cookbook, "Rick Bayless's Mexican Kitchen," which is a companion to the TV show, was given to all those who attended the Highlands Inn demonstration. It is a 448-page hardcover published by Scribner of New York.

Although his show is taped in Chicago, many sequences are shot in Mexico, which takes Bayless to a variety of indoor and outdoor markets with their wondrous displays of colorful and exotic produce.

Watching the show is almost like traveling to small towns and large cities of Mexico — a sort of armchair travelogue peppered with valuable culinary information.

At one time, Bayless was working on his Ph.D. in archaeology, but the love of cooking called to him, and he changed course. He traveled with his wife to each of the 32 states in Mexico and in every town and village, he kept a record of all the fruits and vegetables displayed in the markets, noting the season. He dined in mom-and-pop restaurants, learning the cooking secrets of various dishes.

"I studied Mexican cuisine and produce and kept voluminous, exacting notes, just as if I were going for a Ph.D. in Mexican food," he said. He still adds to those notes and refers to them frequently.

The scholar in this dedicated chef interferes in no way with his passion for cooking and the appreciation of its sensual qualities. You have only to watch his TV show to experience his love for Mexico, its cuisine and its people; his almost lyrical descriptions of colors, flavors and fragrances of the marketplace add a dimension to the program that is often lacking in other cooking shows.

On Saturday, as he made the dark pasilla chile sauce, he wore surgical gloves (the kind you see on "CSI") to remove seeds and veins of the opened chiles, warning us not to touch any sensitive part of our body, especially eyes, after handling the chiles. He explained how to treat a chile burn on the skin with a burn ointment or mild bleach solution.

The major hot parts of a chile are the veins, which can be pulled out easily.

The dried pasillas used as a seasoning paste with the rack of lamb are generally called chile negro in California markets. They are the long (about 7 inches), slender black chile peppers that look like a finger from an old pair of leather gloves. Bayless wrote in his cookbook, "It took me years to get comfortable with pasillas, but now I understand their swarthy nature." The ones he used in his demonstration were so dark brown they appeared black. But the puree is a mahogany brown "with a voluptuous flavor."

Lard not so bad

All sorts of good cooking hints came forth during the demonstration: Bayless said epazote is used fresh in cooking, but for medicinal use, dried epazote, a carminative, is used for settling stomachs. And that lard, used often in Mexican cooking, has half the cholesterol and fat of butter. But don't use just any lard, he recommended — get some pork fat from the butcher and render it in a 350 degree oven until it browns. It will have a roast pork flavor that will make tamales and moles taste delicious.

Although a proponent of reducing intake of saturated fat in the diet, Bayless said, he is glad we've come out of the "low-fat tyranny of the past 20 years." He said we can reduce saturated fat in our meals by "relying less on processed food, eating smaller amounts of meat, feasting only on special occasions and enjoying the roasty flavor of pork lard when traditional wisdom tells us it will enhance the dish."

Obviously Bayless practices what he preaches. Slim of waist and large of biceps, he was seemingly full of energy and good spirits as he busily whisked and stirred the pots on the demo stove while keeping up a steady stream of helpful hints and salient instructions, this despite an eight-hour limo trip from Los Angeles as his flight to the Masters of Food & Wine had been canceled due to the weekend rain storms.

He drove up to Carmel overnight with "Sammy the limo driver and bodyguard" — which was how the driver identified himself on his business card. Appearing fresh as a daisy during the demo, Bayless went on immediately afterward to prepare the main course for 150 at the five-course luncheon in the inn's main salon.

The rack of lamb (two per plate) with dark pasilla chile and woodland mushrooms, and an oh-so-flavorful tamale (it must have been the roasted pork lard that turned the trick), and a small frisée salad with lime dressing, was well received by the lunch crowd. Bayless was given enthusiastic applause when he was introduced after the course was cleared away.

Wines with Mexican fare

During the demo, we asked what beverage should be served with a Mexican meal. He replied that he orders Coke or beer in a diner, but in a finer restaurant will order the occasional tequila (not in a margarita, which he drinks only before dinner or with snacks), and such big wines as Italian Barbera, Australian Syrah, and as for whites, a New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc or an Oregon

Pinot Gris are all excellent.

Lighter wines just won't do with Mexican food, he said because "the food will walk all over them." He prefers reds that can stand up to and complement the depth and complexity of his Mexican cooking, but not Cabernet Sauvignon "because tannins turn smoldering heat into raging fires."

With the luncheon main course, a Jim Barry Wines Shiraz was selected from the Armagh vineyard, Clare Valley, Australia, 2001. It was superb.

2005 Wine Seminar Series
Conducted by Doug Meador, owner of Ventana Vineyards & Meador Estates

"The Wine Seminar was terrific! Doug's knowledge of wine was incredible."
"I have told countless people how wonderful it was!"

March 10, 2005
Thursday 6:30-8:00pm
"Rhône Style Wines, the Rhône Rangers"

Doug Meador in his Ventana Vineyard planted the first Syrah grapes in Monterey County. His vision of Monterey as a Rhône grape region was well ahead of the other growers. This seminar will explore the blending of the Rhône grapes, Syrah and Grenache Noir and the lovely rich red wines that come from those blends. Red wine lovers will have a great time!

April 14, 2005
Thursday 6:30-8:00pm
"Chardonnay—to Oak or not to Oak!"

"A wine only a termite could love!" "Steel fermented." "Just a touch of oak." Let us help you choose your favorite Chardonnay style in terms of oak usage. Doug Meador will take the seminar group through historical Chardonnay styles and New World styles. Included are not only Ventana and Meador Chardonnay styles, but many, many more from around the world.

May 19, 2005
Thursday 6:30-8:00pm
"The Magic of Blends, Interesting and Surprising Whites and Reds"

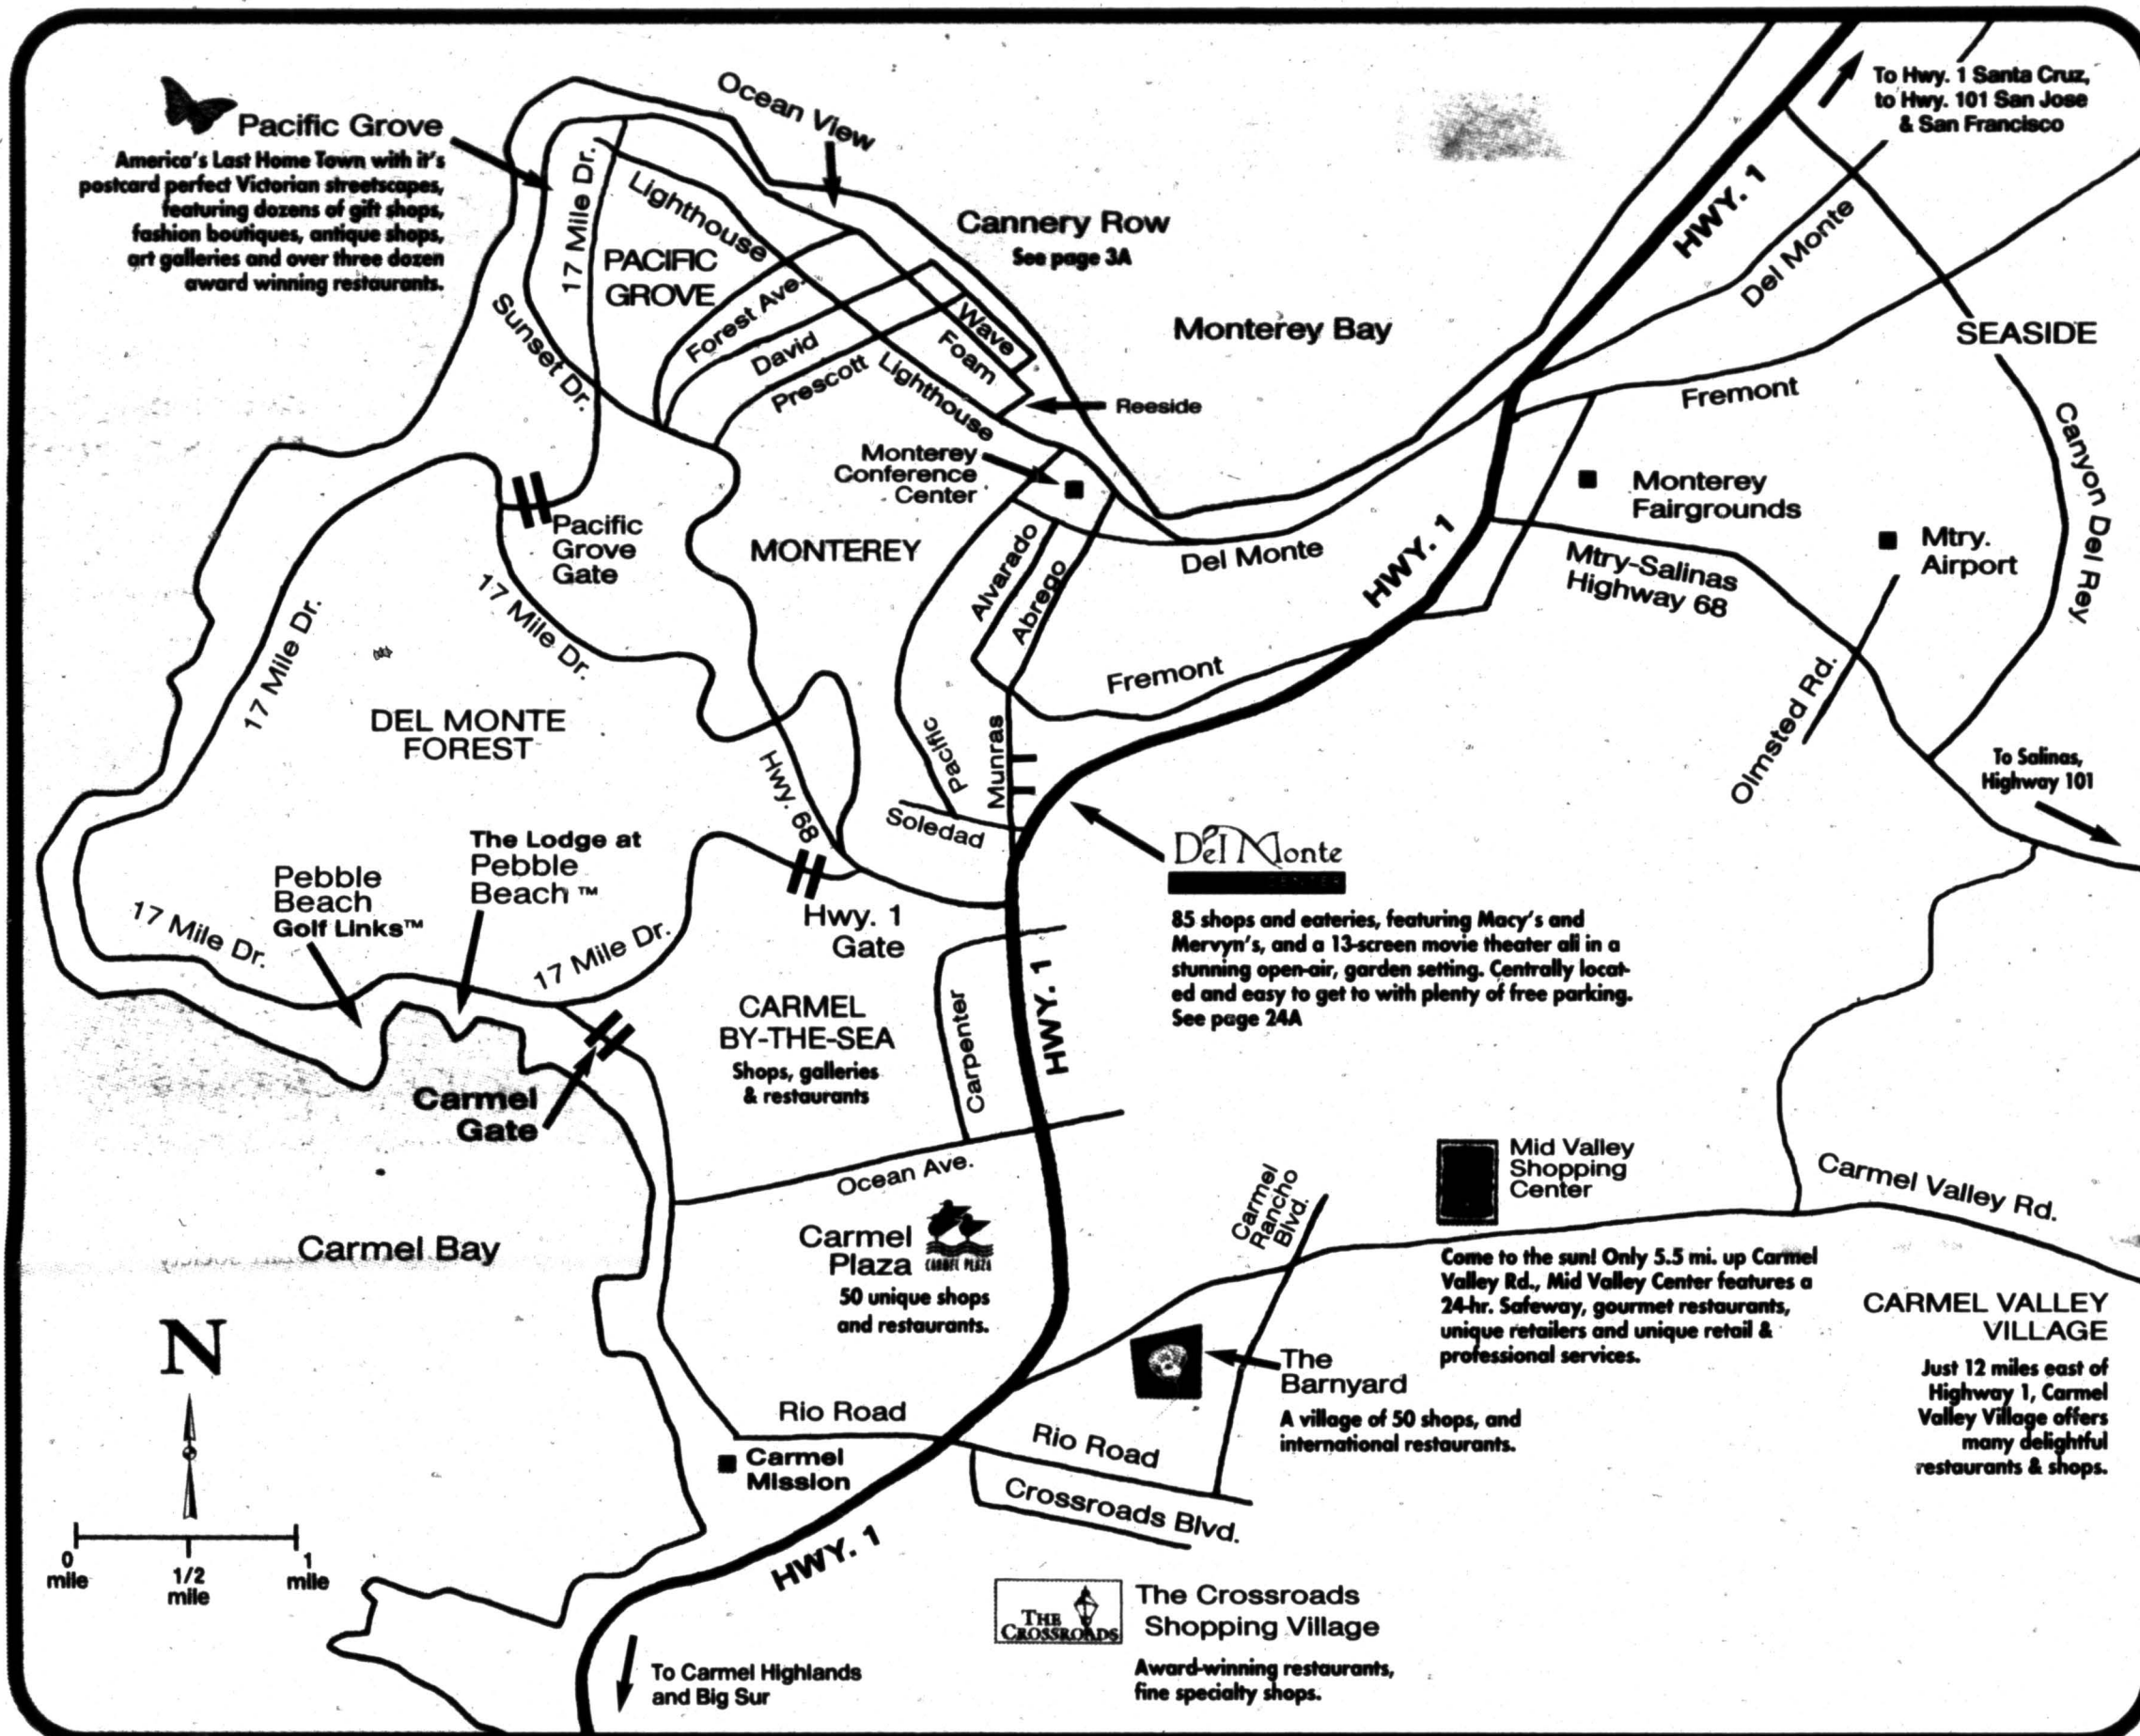

Just as our wine knowledge and palates get used to wines made from 100% of a grape varietal, we are going to mix it up and venture to explore what happens when you blend the grapes to make a wine. Can you blend Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon? Can Red grapes be blended with White Grapes? Enjoy some of Ventana and Meador Estates' blends — Beaugravier, Due Amici, "Magnus" plus other exciting wines chosen by Doug Meador.

SIGN UP NOW! — SEATING IS LIMITED!
Along with the wines, we will serve hors d'oeuvres paired specially for the specific seminar.
$50 per seminar or sign up for any three and receive a savings (3 for $135.00)
All seminars will be held in our new "Salon du Vin" at the Ventana/Meador Estate Tasting Room

Madman's world goes completely blue in new novel

ANOTHER PACIFIC Grove mystery writer has emerged — with two suspense novels set in Monterey County, both with homicide detectives Jim Marks and Justin Nickles, and Jeanette Jamieson, a young psychiatrist, as protagonists.

"Blue Boy," by Michael Donahue, is a story of madness and terrible slayings. The madman's world appears to be entirely blue during his violent episodes. The pressure he feels inside his head is causing the phenomenon, he feels.

Donahue will raise the hackles on your neck as you read, "During these episodes he would find his world turned completely blue. And not just some light shade of blue either. He'd find himself cloaked in a deep, rich, indelible shade. Dark enough and rich enough to overpower all of the other colors in his world, including the crimson stains he would find on his face, gloves, and clothing after the interlude subsided."

Between them, detectives Marks and Nickles and psychiatrist Jamieson work toward a solution until Blue Boy gets his just deserts.

In the second book, "Purple Hayes," commences with the death of a Monterey narcotics task force member, and once again the trio of "Blue Boy" unite to pursue the killer through the ruthless, vicious world of methamphetamines.

Both books keep the reader in suspense until a satisfying denouement is arrived at.

Author Donahue was a criminal and personal injury attorney for almost two decades, and over time he became personally acquainted with all phases of the criminal justice system. His books are well plotted, hold the reader's attention, and have a ring of verisimilitude. Ask for them at your nearest booksellers. You can count on some hair-raising evenings that will keep you on the edge of your chair. Both softcover books are about 290 pages and published by Life Publishers, which is sponsored by Health Communications, Inc.

Chefs Paul Bocuse and Bert Cutino

L'ABBAYE DE Collonges au Mont d'or, the restaurant owned by acclaimed French culinary master, Chef Paul Bocuse, was the scene of the 2005 "Diner d'Hiver" in Lyon, France. Honored at the event was Monterey's Sardine Factory cofounder, COO Bert Cutino, who was awarded the red sash with small copper pot by Les Amis d'Escoffier Society of Chicago. The sash was bestowed by Bocuse. The inductees were honored for their support and achievements accomplished for the profession in promoting the culinary arts and education — as well as for their own artistry in the profession. Chef Cutino is a Certified Executive Chef, Conseiller des Professionnels National of the Chaîne and past chairman of the Academy of Chef's 1995 - 1999. Dinner followed in the Bocuse restaurant.

MORE NEWS from Highlands Inn, Park Hyatt Carmel: Niel Piferoen has been named the new pastry chef and will be in charge of the day-to-day pastry operations of the hotel's Pacific's Edge restaurant. Piferoen commenced his new position just before the Masters of Food and Wine event, a harrowing but exhilarating experience, to be sure. He left Brugge, Belgium, where he graduated from the Baker and Pastry School Ter Groene Poorte, to become the assistant pastry chef at the Nations Bank executive dining room in Washington, D.C., and also in a like capacity at Michel Richard's Citronelle there. Following that, he was with the Ritz-Carlton Reynolds Plantation and Red Sage restaurants, and instructor at the International School of Confectionary Arts in Gaithersburg, Maryland. In 2003 Piferoen returned to his native Belgium to serve as pastry chef of De Karmeliet, a Michelin Three Star restaurant in Brugge. He returned to the states to open as pastry chef for Restaurant Eve in Alexandria, Va., and after that joined Highlands Inn just in time to be sous chef at Chef Bradley Ogden's cooking demonstration at the Masters of Food & Wine.

WHICH BRINGS us the unfortunate incident of Chef Ogden breaking two bones in his hand the week of the Masters of Food & Wine. He climbed up on the cooking demo dais with his right hand and wrist in a cast. But not to worry, he had his teammates, Chef Gerald and Chef Ryan with him (they work in two of his eight Lark Creek Restaurant Group establishments). Gerald and Ryan whipped and stirred the ingredients for a trio of Maytag blue cheese soufflés as Ogden took the mystery out of soufflé making, giving us cooking hints: • When making a roux, add cold milk to the butter and flour. • No dish should be one dimensional; his "taste template" is — acid, crunch, softness, color and clarity. • When giving a dinner party, he bakes the miniature soufflés twice; once the day before, and again just before they are to be served, browning them nicely. • All his restaurant chefs are instructed to toast peppercorns before grinding them.

If you've ever wondered why fine restaurants in Las Vegas are so expensive, it's because restaurateurs pay Fed Ex to fly in fresh produce. For just his Las Vegas restaurant alone, Ogden has 120 growers Fed Exing produce to him. And if you ask him, Ogden will tell you, "It's all about great ingredients."

and doing hair to help support the family; she dropped out of high school her junior year to work full time:

"I lost my whole childhood, actually," she said.

At 20, she had a son, Lee, and in 1973, she left his father and moved west with her mother. While working at the Buckeye restaurant in Carmel Valley Village, she met Ted Leidig, then a part owner and bartender. They married in 1974, and lived with Lee in a run-down studio in the village.

In 1976, when their daughter, Dana, was born, Ilona Leidig said she noticed her husband's moods changing. When he was hyper, she described him as the "Energizer Bunny," and when he became depressed, she said, "He wasn't himself; he would get really quiet."

Ted Leidig has been on medication for bipolar disorder since he was diagnosed in 1981. His former wife said he continued to display erratic behavior, mostly in his business dealings, despite the medication. She said he bought items they could not afford and engaged in "one quick-rich scheme after another."

"I never had any say in what Ted could buy or not buy," she said, adding that he wanted her to be a stay-at-home mother for Lee and Dana while he ran the business. He had an inheritance from his family, she said. "It was his money."

Friends noted her husband driving female employees downtown, she said. "Ted had a big reputation as a big flirt."

Heart attack led to affair

She said health scares also changed him. First, he suffered a heart attack in 1985 — "Ted wouldn't be here if I hadn't taken him to the hospital," she pointed out. He underwent open-heart surgery in 1999 and lost eight units of blood internally due to a bleeding ulcer a few months later.

"There were a lot of changes after that," she said. "He wanted a rebirth. He almost died and wanted another chance."

He wanted to fit all these other things into his life."

He met Laurie Sellars through his work that same year, and a few days before Christmas, an anonymous caller told Ilona Leidig her husband was having an affair, she said. She confronted him and they spent eight hours talking about it, though he denied any romantic involvement.

"I had no idea. I had absolutely no idea he was seeing anybody," she said, struggling with tears and testifying that the news sent her to bed for two months. "My whole world just caved in."

But he promised not to see Sellars anymore, she said. "He made that very clear."

Ilona remained suspicious.

"I knew he was still seeing her," she said. "There were signs, but he wouldn't admit it."

Recounting the years, she said "he just acted very sneaky" in 2001. She would accuse him of seeing Sellars, and he would say she had left the area and he didn't know where she was.

"Ted is a very good liar, and I'm the kind of person who would believe him," she said. "I loved him, and he convinced me that what he would tell me was the truth. I was in denial, too. I didn't want my marriage to end."

In 2002, she was preoccupied with the ongoing remodeling at the Village Lane home they had bought in 1999, and Rosen suggested Ted Leidig used that to keep her busy and unaware of his ongoing affair. She also said he began leaving earlier than usual for work; she later learned he was stopping at Sellars' home every morning.

In the first half of 2003, he began drinking heavily, she said. That summer, Ilona found an envelope addressed to her containing Sellars' Community Bank business card.

"As soon as I saw that, I thought, 'Yep, she's always been here and wants me to know she's here,'" Ilona Leidig said. "It was almost not even a shock."

In June 2003, Ted Leidig packed up and told her he needed time away to think about their marriage.

When they met at Monterey airport June 28 to send Dana to Europe for a few weeks, neither parent shared their troubles with her.

"Ted would not tell her anything," Ilona Leidig said. "He's a coward. We met at the airport, pretended everything was fine, and we put her on the plane."

On July 4, he returned to Village Lane.

"He said, 'We need to work on some things, but we need to stay together,'" Ilona recounted, citing family and their new home as the reasons. They discussed getting counseling.

But after an unpleasant trip with their grandchildren to visit Dana at Disneyland, he left again.

Her testimony for the day ended at that point more than six months before the Feb. 19 argument and Feb. 20 shooting, which Rosen has characterized as self defense. She is set to take the stand again Friday afternoon.

Former mistress testifies

The previous day, after prosecutor Angela McNulty finished calling witnesses, Rosen launched into his defense. He called the former Laurie Sellars (who married Ted Leidig last month and has taken his name) and her former on-again-off-again boyfriend, Peter Lopez, as well as Ilona Leidig's friend, Carmen Ajan; her sister, Deborah Maxson; and her mother, Vera Simone.

Laurie Leidig told of her long-term affair with Ted Leidig that led to her 2003 pregnancy and a marriage proposal from him following his filing for divorce that September. They periodically lived together and took a Caribbean cruise in October 2003, but from mid-January until the Feb. 20 shooting, Ted Leidig had been living with his wife again and attempting to salvage his relationship with their daughter.

Though Rosen suggested otherwise, Laurie Leidig insisted she was never afraid of her lover — even when he was upset by the fact that she had been dating Peter Lopez — and that he never insulted or berated her.

E-mails and calls to Lopez in which she mentioned fear pertained to Ted Leidig's health and happiness or her own lack of security — not fear of the man himself, she testified. Also diagnosed with bipolar disorder, Laurie Leidig said she could not take drugs while pregnant, making her very emotional and depressed at the time.

"I loved Ted, and I wanted him to be with me because it was right and the right time to be with me — not spending the time with me guilt-ridden and punishing himself."

But Lopez testified that his former girlfriend frequently said she feared Ted Leidig and complained of his verbal abuse. Lopez changed the lock on her Carmel Valley Village home at her request in August 2003 during one of her breakups with Ted Leidig, and he said they spent the night together following verbal altercations between her and Ted Leidig.

Witnesses saw bruises

Other witnesses said they saw bruises on Ilona Leidig in the months before the shooting. John Tomkinson, a handyman for Ted Leidig for the past decade, told the court she had shown him bruises on her wrists and shoulder/collarbone area one day while he was working at their Village Lane home. He advised her to tell her mother or daughter, as well as the police.

After receiving a subpoena to testify for the defense, Tomkinson said Ted Leidig was upset with him for telling what he had seen, though they still work together. He said there was a feeling among others working for Ted Leidig that no one should talk to the defense.

Simone, Ilona Leidig's 77-year-old mother, said she spied bruises on her daughter on four or five occasions.

And while she could not testify about what Ilona Leidig said in their frequent phone conversations, Maxson said, "I told her to call the police. Numerous times, I told her. I could see physical changes in her, through pictures sent to me at home. She was getting thinner. She sounded very depressed."

Carmen Ajan, ex-wife of one of Ted Leidig's restaurant partners, Csaba Ajan, said she has known Ilona Leidig for a quarter century but admitted she has not seen much of her in the last five years. Ajan described her friend as growing more sad, quiet and introverted, and she described Ted as showy with his money and overbearing, insisting on having the last word in any discussion.

"He was not honest with his morals or his business," Ajan said.

Ilona Leidig's testimony is set to resume at 1 p.m. Feb. 25, and Rosen is expected to call a witness who will tell the court about symptoms of battered woman's syndrome but is forbidden from concluding whether Ilona Leidig was suffering symptoms of it at the time of the shooting.

A "celebration of life" memorial service will take place Saturday, March 5, for ELIZABETH (BETTY) M. BROWN, of Carmel, who died Feb. 7. She was 82.

A native of Chicago, she grew up in the small, rural town of Bangor, Mich. She joined the U.S. Navy and moved to Washington, D.C., where she met her future husband, Eugene Roger Steuart, Jr. of Monkton, Md. Married in 1944 in Monkton, the couple went on to raise two daughters, until 1962, when Mr. Steuart was killed in a car accident at the age of 42.

Ten years later, she met and married Thomas E. Brown of Towson, Md. She moved with her new husband to Ocean City, Md., and was employed by the Taustin Corporation, becoming not only an invaluable secretary to Mr. Taustin, but a most trusted friend of the entire Taustin family. Widowed again in 1977, Mrs. Brown returned to Bangor to care for her mother and embark on a 16-year career as the assistant to the superintendent of the Bangor School District.

When she moved to Carmel in 1996 in order to be closer to her California family, she tended her longtime friendships from a distance but also quickly opened her heart to her new community. In the last eight years of her life, she worked in the office of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, served on the vestry and sang in the choir. She volunteered at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and was a member of the Carmel Foundation. She fulfilled a life-long dream when she traveled to the Holy Land in October 2000.

Mrs. Brown is survived by two daughters, Susan C. Tanner of San Francisco and Mary S. Poland of Carmel; a grandson, Austin S. Poland, and great-grandson, Tyler Kelly Poland of Santa Cruz; granddaughter, Ashleigh C. Poland of Carmel; her sister, Barbara Kruger and family in Michigan.

The memorial service will begin at 2:30 p.m. March 5 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Carmel Valley.

Memorials in her name may be sent to St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, P.O. Box 101, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

BETH FREIERMUTH WAGNER, a Watsonville native, died Feb. 9 at her Pebble Beach residence just eight days short of her 94th birthday.

Born to a pioneer Watsonville family, she was descended from P.J. Freiermuth, who migrated from Germany. She was a 1929 graduate of Watsonville High School and earned her bachelor's degree and teacher's credential from San Jose State College. Before her marriage, she was a P.E. teacher at Watsonville High School.

Mrs. Wagner loved the outdoors, camping and hiking with her family, and hunting and fishing with her husband. She was active in all the parishes to which she belonged, including Holy Cross Church in Santa Cruz and St. John's Church in Felton. She taught religion classes, played the organ, sang in the choir and became a member of the Altar Society.

Living in Pebble Beach for the last 18 years, she was a member of St. Angela's Church, Catholic Daughters of America, the Secular Franciscan Order and Holy Cross Fraternity, and she was a Dame of Malta.

Mrs. Wagner is survived by George, her husband of 67 years; her children, Arthur of San Jose, Terese Abbott of Connecticut, Phil of Santa Cruz and Tom of Felton; 10 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Any contributions may be made in the form of spiritual bouquets for Beth.

CARMEL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE - 624-2522 - March 2005

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

By Tom Williams, 2004 CCC President
"What's good for business is good for Carmel"

Vote "NO" on TOT measure

On January 27, the Carmel Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors voted unanimously to not support the current measure to raise the TOT in Carmel. We invite you to stand with us to defeat this measure. The following is our official position:

The Carmel Chamber of Commerce, with over 500 member businesses and representing every hotel and inn in Carmel, is opposed to the increase in the Transient Occupancy Tax, the tax on each room stay in any hotel in Carmel. The measure ignores the needs of the hotel and inns industry and is detrimental to their livelihood. As presented, the measure specifies exactly where and how the increased revenue will be spent. As the duly elected officials of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, the city council should be able to make those allocations predicated on its knowledge of the needs of the community at large, not one special interest group. Should the current measure be defeated, the Chamber and its over 500 member businesses, is prepared to work very closely with the city council to determine how best to create new revenue. We are not opposed to an increase in the TOT per se but insist the money raised be managed by the city council.

The Carmel Chamber of Commerce, through its visitor center on San Carlos, serves over 300,000 people per year in person, on the phone, or on the website. During 2005, we are spending $ 50,000 to create a new, accessible, visitor center on San Carlos. We believe a larger portion of any money raised by an increase in the TOT be used to market and promote Carmel-by-the-Sea. Since the money comes directly from the tourist industry it makes good business sense to direct a larger portion of that money back. In this way the community at large and business will both benefit by increased tourism and more friends to our community. All of which will raise more funds through sales tax and TOT.

who is a favorite to win an Oscar Sunday night for his brilliant work on "Million Dollar Baby," adapted James Bradley's best-selling book, "Flags of Our Fathers," for Eastwood and his co-producer, Steven Spielberg.

"It's a very good script," Eastwood said. Now, the hard work of recreating one of the most complex battles of World War II begins. "The first thing is, how are we going to do it?"

Next month, Eastwood heads to Japan and Iwo Jima with some of his production staff to figure out how much of "Flags" can be shot on location, what scenes can be done in a sound stage, and what aspects of the complicated story will have to be digitally recreated.

"We'll have a cast of more than 100, but there's no way we'll be able to muster 880 ships, which is what the armada was when the invasion of Iwo Jima began."

While in Japan, he'll also be meeting with the son of Tadamichi Kuribayashi, Commanding General of the Imperial Japanese Army on Iwo Jima, whose orders were to defend the island to the death of every last man.

"They knew they weren't coming home," Eastwood said. "Iwo Jima was the first piece of Japanese real estate invaded by the American Army, and it was a critical stepping stone on the way to Tokyo."

More than 20,000 Japanese soldiers died defending Iwo Jima. American dead numbered 6,800 — in just 25 days.

"A lot of people made the ultimate sacrifice. And the men who made it back home were just told, 'Get over it' — it was a different deal from what we have today," Eastwood observed.

While his attention is on World War II, Hollywood is agog over the picture he released in December. But Eastwood's wife, Dina, said her husband doesn't relish being fawned over.

"He would rather have his fingernails torn off than walk down the red carpet again," she said. "I'm like everybody else — I want to see all the stars, what they're wearing, and say 'Hi' to people. But Clint would just as soon go in the back door."

Dina had her choice of more than 200 Armani gowns to wear to the Oscar awards show. But she chose the first one she put on.

"It's a heavy satin number, with a big rhinestone buckle, and as soon as I tried it on, I said, 'That's it!'"

Her husband will also wear Armani — and there's an important reason for their loyalty. The producer of "Million Dollar Baby," Jim Ruddy, is married to Wanda McDaniel Ruddy, a public relations exec for the famous designer.

Dina, famous around these parts for her down-to-earth demeanor — on the way to the Kennedy Center Awards dinner at the White House in 2000, she forgot her earrings and asked the chauffeur to pull over at the Rite Aid so she could run inside and buy a couple of rhinestone dangles — said her husband refuses to let her gel his hair or otherwise mess with his looks.

"A hair stylist from Warner Bros. will come over to our house right before the awards show, and she'll blow dry Clint's hair in the right direction," Dina said. "And that's about it."

Eastwood's mother, Ruth Wood, and Dina's mother, Mary Lou Ruiz, will attend the ceremony. Dina said they're sure to have the best seats in the house.

"When we're at home, Clint is just a regular guy, but when we go to one of these events and I look at the seating chart, that's when I'm reminded how revered he is," Dina said.

Eastwood admitted he dreads the red-carpet walk. "The reporters always ask you the same question, 'How are you feeling?'"

Presumably the answer, "Like you're pulling my fingernails out," wouldn't fly at the Oscars.

"'Million Dollar Baby' was released nationwide in mid-January and it still enjoying a very strong box office, Eastwood said — not only because the critics loved it, but because audiences are so moved by it.

"According to some of the people at Warner Bros., it has the highest exit polling of any movie they've ever seen," Dina said.

But she didn't realize how good the movie was when it

Editorial

Whose water is it, anyway?

IMAGINE YOU own 20,000 acres of land that every year, on average, receive more than 30 inches of rain. That's 50,000 acre-feet of water, which is a tremendous amount — so large, it's more than three times the entire yearly supply allotted to everyone in Carmel Valley, Carmel, Pebble Beach, Big Sur, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Seaside.

Now imagine that you somehow managed to make it through the county's arduous permit process — even the California Environmental Quality Act didn't stop you — and you've got permits to build 350 homes on your land.

Each of those homes will need a water supply, of course. And, since they'll be built for rich people, they'll probably have plenty of bathrooms, and lots of landscaping, and maybe a swimming pool or hot tub. So let's assume that each house will use 2 acre feet of water per year, or 700 AF in all. Even though that's a lot for 350 houses, it's a minuscule amount compared to the water that Mother Nature reliably bestows on your land — just 1.4 percent of the rain that falls.

And that's not the whole story of the eventual water use on your 20,000 acres. Because the homes you're going to build will utilize much of their water on a lawn or a garden, it will return to the same watershed that was the rain's destination.

The bottom line: Hardly any of the water that falls on your land as rain will end up being "wasted" in the homes you build.

It's a different story downhill from your property. Down there, in Carmel Valley, almost 10,000 acre feet are drawn from the river every year for human use. And most of that ends up being transported out of the watershed. So when the pumps switch on along the Carmel River, sending precious H₂O to Pacific Grove, Monterey or Seaside, the river loses. Big time.

It has suffered so much that one of the Carmel River's natives, the steelhead trout, has become a threatened species, according to federal wildlife officials. They're very concerned about the fish's survival. And the Endangered Species Act requires them to try to save it.

So what do these federal officials do? Do they lower the boom on the 100,000 people whose washing machines, showers and sprinklers have sucked the Carmel River dry? Do they so much as ask them to conserve?

Nope.

This imaginary situation is for real. The property is called Rancho San Carlos and, despite its tiny water use, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service sent a young lawyer to threaten county officials with prosecution for approving the final phase of the ranch's building permits. "Gall" and "arrogance" are not too harsh to describe their attitude. Last week, they again warned the board of supervisors of dire consequences if they let Rancho San Carlos proceed.

Once again, we see how foolish government officials can be, and how policies that are utterly devoid of common sense can be given the full weight and authority of a powerful federal agency.

Letters to the Editor

'King George would have been proud'

Dear Editor,

We Americans pride ourselves on being fair and just. We also believe people should pay their fair share. The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has already found that those people we call "tourists" already pay more than their fair share of their costs to visit our village, amounting to some 65 percent of the revenue for our needs, far above their impact.

Now some citizens want to go further with this "taxation without representation." It may be only a 20-percent increase, but the amount is irrelevant. The principle is wrong and unfair. Our forefathers would be dumping tea at the very thought. Some of our citizens seem to think it's OK to further tax those who cannot speak for themselves. King George III would have been proud of you. Be an American and vote NO on the tax initiative.

Clay Berling, Carmel

Why shouldn't visitors pay?

Dear Editor,

Carmel's long tradition of high quality public services, quiet tree-lined streets, beautifully maintained parks and a dramatically gorgeous beach draw residents and businesses to our village. These benefits and the solitude that shape our quality of life also bring huge numbers of visitors. We must not continue to take the minimalist approach to our declining public services and defer the maintenance of our roads and civic buildings. We must not continue to downsize, rightsize or any other size. One size does not fit Carmel!

We must not continue to pay high-priced contractors to provide rubber-stamped, vanilla-coated services that don't take into account the fact that Carmel is not like Anytown, USA. City Hall's decision to out-source jobs and responsibilities may seem cheaper, but in the long run we lose our character, individuality and the very things that drew us and visitors here.

We must turn this village around by bringing back our lost public services and improving the quality of life that made Carmel a special place. Why shouldn't the visitors help pay for improvements so that city hall will stop downsizing and outsourcing our future.

Vote YES with me for an increase in the

Roger Premier, Carmel

Missing the obvious

Dear Editor,

In her letter to the editor in The Pine Cone, Feb. 18 Karen Brown missed an obvious point with her perplexity over the objection of the Carmel City Council and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce to Measure A's proposed increase of the Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT). In the cities mentioned — Healdsburg, Napa, St. Helena, Calistoga and Sausalito — the extra money collected from TOT is earmarked for advertising, destination marketing and the support of their tourism industry. Measure A in Carmel offers the crumb of one-eighth of the 20 percent increase for marketing and tourism. The cities mentioned above invest many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year for destination marketing. Carmel, due in part to the reluctance of a few citizens to understand an investment in destination marketing is also an investment in the village of Carmel, spends less than $100,000 a year.

The obvious point about the cities mentioned above is their commitment to destination marketing investment and an overwhelming desire to achieve the very best their villages can offer to their tourist friends.

Measure A, as written, has no sunset clause, does not allow the duly-elected city council to use its discretion in spending, and earmarks funds for city albatross properties that the electorate, in the recent election, wanted the council to sell. Join the more than 500 business owners of Carmel and the city council in defeating this flawed measure.

Tom Williams, Carmel

Missed one!

Dear Editor,

As a proud parent, I have to note that your report on National Merit Finalists (Feb. 18) miscounted. There is at least an eleventh finalist from Monterey County, our son, Tyler Payne. Tyler is a senior at the Monterey Academy of Oceanographic Sciences (MAOS), a 300-student academy within Monterey High School. In addition to excelling in class, he is league champion in his weight class in wrestling and a long-time volunteer student guide at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Tyler is applying to several eastern universities and University of California campuses for next year.

Bob Payne, Salinas

Predominantly a Residential Community

Dear Editor,

As a member of Carmel Traffic Safety Commission since its creation two years ago, I have been approached by many of you expressing concerns about safety. The most numerous, by far, have been about speeding in residential areas.

In response, the TSC studied the matter over many months. Recently the TSC voted unanimously to recommend that the city council reduce speed limits in certain residential areas, specifically east of Junipero, both north and south of Ocean, as well as north of 5th Street. Alternatively, the council could expand the affected areas. Arterials, truck routes and divided streets would be excluded.

Carmel is many things — a small shopping village and business community. It is a place of extraordinary natural beauty and a destination for tourists worldwide. But above all, Carmel is a residential community. This deep-rooted commitment to maintaining the residential nature of our community dates back to the city's founders. In fact, directly above the Mayor's chair in Council Chambers is a resolution passed in 1929. It reads, "The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby determined to be primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential City. [Other uses should be] subordinate was being shot at Warner Bros. in Burbank.

"Not until we were in the editing room at Mission Ranch, and I saw the first rough cut," she said. "There were two men in there and me, and we were all crying."

"It's a love story, and it becomes terribly dynamic," Eastwood said. He scoffed when asked about the mini-controversy over the film's alleged endorsement of euthanasia.

"I guess the people who said those things are entitled to their opinions, but I guess I'm entitled to my opinion that it was stupid," he said.

Eastwood, who will be 75 on May 31, said he's not at all nervous about Sunday night. Dina disagreed, saying she thinks he does feel some of the pressure of being at the center of such a huge event.

"But I am just excited," she said. "I've never been with him when he's won an Oscar, and this time I know he's going to win one. The question is, will he win them all?"

"Million Dollar Baby" has seven Academy Award nominations: Best Picture, Best Director (Eastwood), Best Actor (Eastwood), Best Actress (Hilary Swank), Best Supporting Actor (Morgan Freeman), Best Editing (Joel Cox) and Best Adapted Screenplay (Paul Haggis). The awards ceremony will be broadcast Sunday at 5 p.m. on ABC.

to its residential character"

This plaque, looms there as an important reminder to us all, and most importantly to our elected officials, to protect this essential character of our city and our home.

As we walk and drive the residential areas of town, we enjoy the beauty of its narrow, often single-lane twisting roads, corners often obscured by natural growth and hills and curves blind to oncoming traffic. But this is as it should be. Carmel is unique; we do not need or want our street corners gutted of vegetation, or our streets "made safe" by straightening roads (as recommended, in one case, by the recent traffic study), or adding streetlights or stop signs on every corner.

We have all had to "jump" out of the way of careening autos and pickup trucks driven by people who seem to think Carmel's twisted, narrow, often bumpy residential streets are a fun place to enjoy some high-speed off-roading.

It is time to end this! Without a reduction in the posted speed limit in these areas, the police are powerless to remedy the problem. And now, with this recommendation from the Traffic Safety Commission waiting to be placed on the council's agenda, it is time for every citizen who feels in kind to call or write our elected officials or Public Safety Director George Rawson. Make your feelings known! Do not leave this to someone else! This opportunity may not come again, for a very long time!

Is a Reverse Mortgage Right for You?

A reverse mortgage turns a portion of your equity into tax-free money you can use right now. You make no monthly payments on a reverse mortgage and the loan is not due to be paid until you sell, move out of the house or pass away.

You can use this money for any purpose; living expenses, home improvements or a grandchild's college education.

Homeowners who are 62 or older may qualify and be eligible even if there is an existing first or second mortgage. The size of the reverse mortgage depends upon the borrower's age(s), the program selected, the home's value, and prevailing interest rates. There are no income qualifications and you continue to retain title to your home.

Call if you have questions or wish a free Reverse Mortgage Handbook.

NOHEA (NO-HAY-A) Cross, 6, may look somewhat like a German shepherd, but she's a Belgian Tervuren. A working dog, the Tervuren is similar to and closely related to the Belgian sheepdog.

Nohea sports a Hawaiian name because Mom Marcia and brothers Rick and Marc were all born and lived in Hawaii for many years. In fact the Cross' four former dogs, all German shepherds, were given Hawaiian names too.

A year-and-a-half-ago, soon-to-be brother Rick saw Nohea's mug shot in an SPCA newspaper advertisement, so he and Mom Marcia drove down immediately.

"We went straight to her cage," Mom Marcia said, "because we wanted her. I fell in love with that face, those eyes that said, 'I'm here, and I'm waiting for you.'"

Nohea's long black fur highlighted with cinnamon, and complementary beige parts, are almost movie-star like. Coupled with her long ears, hazel eyes, and large, endearing paws, Nohea would stand out on any movie set.

Liking to be on the go, whether it's on an outing to the beach or just going shopping, Nohea loves to ride in the car. When she sees Mom preparing to go out, she virtually jumps for joy, but when she's not permitted to go, she pulls a long face. When Mom returns, Nohea bears no grudge; she greets her with great affection.

At home she enjoys climbing up on Rick's bed to listen to his guitar music, playing with her porcupine ball and sleeping in her "blankie," which is really her bed.

2004 CONDO MARKET SMASHES 2003 RECORD

House Talk

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini and Mark Ryan

TWO WEEKS ago, our column reported that Monterey Peninsula home sales smashed all records last year, reaching an astounding total sales volume of $1.6 billion. And condo sales in 2004, it turns out, also set an all-time record of $150,754,000, obliterating 2003's record-breaking sales volume of $110,339,000. That was an increase in dollar volume of 36.7 percent in just one year.

Not-so-extreme makeovers can net homeowners top dollar

By RITA LEWIS
Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty

EVERYWHERE YOU turn these days you can see homeowners renovating their property. Perhaps it's because of the historically low interest rates available right now. Or maybe it's all the home improvement shows on television. Or perhaps it's simply because home values have been soaring and people are investing in their most valuable asset. But whatever the reason, Monterey Peninsula homeowners are spending record amounts to improve their properties through additions and remodeling.

While property values over time are determined by many factors, the care and upkeep of a property is certainly a crucial element toward getting top dollar when it comes time to sell. But what is the right work to do in order to get the best return? Whether you are planning to add more rooms to create extra space, upgrade your kitchen with new appliances, or are just thinking of putting your home on the market, here are some home improvement tips that might increase the value of your home:

Kitchen makeovers: Out of all the rooms in the house, the kitchen is the most popular to remodel. According to Remodeling Magazine, money spent to upgrade a kitchen produces the highest return on investment. "Hot" kitchen makeover trends include adding dual sinks, cooking stations, extra-long dishwashers, under-cabinet lighting, warming ovens and wine coolers.

Bathroom fixer-uppers: Upgrading a bathroom is also a sound choice and will usually provide a significant return on investment. Large bathrooms are typically on the top of the list of priorities for those seeking to purchase a home. Adding skylights, glass block windows, ceiling fans and sunken whirlpool baths are also attractive selling features. If you don't have the room to expand or to accommodate larger appliances, or you don't think you'll be living in your home long enough to enjoy the changes and/or see a return on this kind of investment, stick with neutral, mid-builder-level updated cabinetry, refreshed flooring and shower/tub, or a new sink and toilet.

Room to grow: Adding a room or two, such as a spare bedroom or a study, is a significant home improvement that you will be able to take advantage of every day. In addition to the much-needed extra space, it can also potentially provide you with a good return on your investment when it comes to selling the property.

Landscaping: A professionally landscaped yard can certainly increase the "curb appeal" or desirability of a home. In fact, beautifying your lawn can be one of the most inexpensive home improvements. Simple landscaping projects can also include trimming and edging the grass, manicuring the trees and shrubs to open up the view of the house, removing any dead plants and putting in flowers to brighten up the yard.

Repair Jobs: Many homeowners want to update and remodel their kitchen, but if the roof needs fixing or the chimney has to be reappointed, they should prioritize these necessary repairs over any cosmetic changes. This applies to both sellers and those who plan to stay in the home for years to come. These essential repairs must be taken care of before they cause the house to lose value. It is vital to look after the minor problems such as a leaky faucet or a loose cabinet to ensure that your house doesn't undergo any long-term damage. As soon as you notice a problem, fixing it will help avoid a larger expense later on.

Cosmetic touch-ups: A paint job, new double-paned windows and new carpeting will increase the price of a house virtually dollar-for-dollar. Neutral colored paint and eliminating clutter can make a world of difference. However, don't go overboard with home improvement projects that will push a house too much above the current average value of homes in your neighborhood. It is important to make sure that your home has standards that are in line with the other houses in the neighborhood. But you do not want to price yourself out of the market.

Home improvement professionals for hire: Whether you need an architect, gardener, interior designer or contractor, it is always important to do a background check prior to hiring a professional. Get references from family or friends and interview them — checking is critical. The most important quality to look for is trust, not initial price. Your local realtor can often provide homeowners referrals to home improvement professionals.

Funding options: There are a number of options for property owners looking to upgrade their homes, including a cash-out refinance, a home equity line of credit or a second mortgage. Contact your local bank, mortgage lender or realtor for current interest rates and mortgage prices, repayment options, and professional mortgage advice.

a healthy paycheck — enough to buy a house in Southern California, according to his dad — for playing the game he loves. Certainly he's doing something right. Perhaps a second chance is possible. It's clear somebody out there believes in him.

Prieto's baseball resume reads like a minor league road map. Playing for the Rancho Cucamonga Quakes in the California League in early 1997, he set a team record with eight straight hits. Later the same year, Prieto hit .320 for the Bears of Mobile Bay, Alabama. He was named the team's Most Valuable Player and a Southern League all-star.

After stealing 25 bases for the Albuquerque Dukes in 2000, Prieto joined the Mexico City Red Devils late in the year and hit a sizzling .366. In 2001, he hit a career-high 19 home runs for the Las Vegas 51s and was chosen to play in the AAA all-star game. He was the starting centerfielder for the 2003 Pacific Coast League champion Sacramento River Cats. He led all PCL outfielders in fielding and did not commit an error in 260 chances. Last season, playing for the Memphis Redbirds, Prieto stole 28 bases, the fifth-highest total in AAA, the highest level of minor league baseball.

Prieto admits his game has limitations, but he believes he is good enough to play in the major leagues.

"I do everything well, but I don't do anything great," said Prieto. "You have to watch me for an entire season to see all the things I bring to the table that help my team win."

After playing a staggering total of 1,176 minor-league games, what motivates Prieto to keep proving himself over and over again?

"It's all the people who told me I couldn't make it," said Prieto, who played Little League baseball in Carmel as a boy. "I've been told that I'm too small or I don't have enough power. It would mean a lot to me to play just one game in the major leagues. It would be a testament to my perseverance. I'd like to spend one day in a big league clubhouse. It would all be worthwhile just to put on a major league uniform."

And what if Prieto's dream of playing in The Show never comes true?

"Baseball is a tough game and you have to roll with the punches," said Prieto, who is married and lives in Fontana, California. "But I'll have no regrets."

CONDOS

The largest condo markets on the Peninsula, in terms of the number of units built, are Monterey and Carmel Valley. Monterey enjoyed a 10.5 percent gain in dollar volume, while the number of transactions fell a bit from 61 in 2003 to 54 in 2004. Carmel Valley was more robust with a 21-percent gain in dollar volume while recording one fewer transaction than in 2003.

Prices continue toward stars

Prices registered strong gains again in 2004. All of the markets were up with the exception of the under-one-million-dollar price range in Pebble Beach that dropped a smidgen. The leaders were Salinas/Monterey Highway, up 70 percent; Carmel Valley, up 58 percent, and Seaside, up 53 percent.

Salinas/Monterey Highway also topped the five-year gain with an increase of 205 percent, followed by Marina, up 165 percent, and Carmel Valley, up 127 percent. Carmel showed the smallest gain, up 72 percent since 1999.

Also the number of days on the market declined in 2004, a reflection of strong demand. Only Marina had a slight gain from 33 to 35 days. All the rest of the markets for which we have numbers had solid improvements. Carmel and Carmel Valley had huge changes going from 133 days to 77 and 153 to 84, respectively.

Market Barometer

The Market Barometer measures the percentage of listings in escrow. On January 1 the Barometer measured 44 percent. A spot check on February 8 showed a slight softening to a reading of 39 percent. On that date 22 of the 56 listings were in escrow. However, 12 of the remaining 34 listings still available for buyers were in either Hacienda Carmel or Del Mesa Carmel — complexes that limit purchasers to those who are at least 55 years old. For the younger buyers, there still was not much choice.

It has been a sellers market for condos since mid-2002, and we expect it to continue this year.

loss of her purse near the post office.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident at Third and Lincoln called to report that someone called her home five times in the past day. Nothing was said, just a beeping noise from what appeared to be a fax machine. She needed the incident documented per SBC Global services.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported numerous items taken from his vehicle while it was parked in the area of Sixth and Dolores.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person reported the loss of a duffle-bag style piece of luggage containing female and children's clothing. The bag may have also contained an unknown brand flip-style cell phone. She believes she may have lost the duffle bag while unloading her vehicle on Sunday 02-13. The bag may have been left unattended in the process of unloading the vehicle and bringing items into the Fifth Avenue residence. She did not notice the bag was missing until today. If located, please notify.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to reported medical emergency on Scenic Road. Both units at scene assessed and treated a female with a laceration on her leg. The patient was loaded into the ambulance for transport to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a reported liquid fuel spill at Lincoln and Seventh. A vehicle parked at the first parking space at the northwest corner had been leaking fuel at a slow rate for approximately one hour, for a total loss of two to three gallons of gasoline along the curbing on the north side of Seventh Avenue. Public works and fire crews applied five bags of absorbent along the spill area, and Monterey County Health and State Fish and Game were notified. At station, contact with county health advised that due to the fact the fuel did not run through the storm drain system, the absorbent should be cleaned up prior to any further rain. Public works notified for cleanup.

Pebble Beach: A male, age 57, reported that on 02-07, unknown suspect(s) opened the hatchback to his car while it was parked at a Crest Road residence and removed a 400-watt power inverter and a jump-start power station, worth a total of $102. No suspect information.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unknown subject(s) threw eggs at several vehicles while they were parked in a section of the business district on Lincoln Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female subject reported being followed by her ex-neighbor in an effort to find the location of her new residence. Female subject and the male neighbor had previous unresolved allegations against each other that caused her to move. CPD units conducted a civil standby while the female subject removed her final furnishings from her old Second Avenue residence.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Reporting party was concerned about a subject seen parked and sitting inside his vehicle in the area of San Carlos and Seventh for several hours at a time. Same subject has been seen three days in a row and the caller was concerned the subject may be casing local businesses in the area.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported a pine tree was possibly uprooting due to the wet saturated soil. She thought there was a potential of the tree collapsing on an adjacent home on Lincoln Street. The city building official arrived to inspect the base of the tree and could not find any indication of the tree uprooting. As a precautionary measure, the city forester was also contacted and advised of the situation. The city forester stated he will inspect the tree as soon as possible. The building official spoke to the son of the homeowner, and the son was advised of the situation. At 1550 hours, received a telephone call from the building official who stated the forester had inspected the tree. There was no indication of the tree uprooting.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female subject reported her vehicle was damaged by a fallen branch from a city-owned tree at Lincoln and Fifth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle on San Carlos Street with gas leak was towed to Carmel Chevron.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and battalion chief responded to reported odor investigation near San Carlos and Fifth. Units at scene found a parked vehicle on the west side near the camera store leaking fuel at a slow rate from its fuel tank. CPD arranged and contacted AAA for tow. Stood by for safety and cleanup.
